

Neutral: Rich or Poor

For those are rich can seem poor dress poor but their hearts ain't rich. Being rich is not what you have or got. It is what you dearly work for or got there on their own style.

Being poor is the most hurtful thing but sometimes they could be rich inside of them who they are and what they do yeah they ain't rich but their rich inside of them how they treat others or how they act for themselves. Some poor people heart could be rich fill with golden, for rich people their heart could be mean, evil, somewhat sometime rich people could help out the poor people and some poor people could help out the rich people. It's both ways but mostly the poor understand the struggle because they are in it and have been going through a hard time. Poor and rich people could understand in different ways at the same time but could connect in a set of a life style.

Neutral: Good or Bad

There this one person named Goku and he a very good person make good amount of money almost 50,000 dollars a year his business is fixing up cars in Denver. He does every good on his work his own business, and he works hard at it where he is not used to being able to stay bonuses his own tools lose is own sight where he good at talking to other people where he doesn't lose his own focus and stay on top of his own work, where he doesn't make others do his own work sometimes to get them where they want to be bacuslly to own their own business.

But if anyone try talking down on Goku he gonna fight back yeah you could say Goku love to fight yeah its not cool or okay to fight people unless it something that they had said to you that you didn't like about where that Goku worst move to do he fight others to prove who is stronger or to get better. Where Goku lose people for his job/business, Maybe on or soon Goku will need to find a better business because he lost his own business got shut down people was already leaving his business.

Evil: Good

There this other person named Jake where he makes a good amount of money like a 1,000 dollars a year, but he does not like people to shove him what to do or how to get things done for him where he doesn't follow others to get his work done he does his own things when it's not time for break he will go right into break 5 min before early to head a break. But he is good at fixing things own is own where he had to fix his own car to get it running where he wouldn't be late to work yes he had it done before heading to work on time. He had improved himself to move bigger things out his way.

Good: Evil

There this one person named Jose where he is good at learning and making new work for himself even for others he good at fixing things and where he is not so good at other things like putting boxes after boxes where he forgets to put them into olders, where he is good at talking to other people and yes Jose is very nice good person. Jose love working on his own where sometimes people will go up to him just to ask a simple question, he answered the question fully of his own point of view sometimes others agree with him sometimes some don't but he doesn't care but he does care what people feel about and yes he try to understand there and then yes he make other people happy even if they are unhappy try to brighten up their day.

For A.I. in the UK more than 350,000 paralegals, payroll managers, and bookkeepers could lose their jobs if automated systems can do the same work. Carl Cullinane tells The Verge. Cullinane says that for individuals who weren't able to attend university or get particular qualifications, semi-administrative jobs are often a way in to professional industries he says. These include so-called "soft skills" like confidence, motivation, communication, and resilience. "It's long established that private schools put a lot of effort into making sure their pupils have those sorts of skills,” says Cullinane.

which was carried out by the Boston Consulting Group and published this Wednesday, looks specifically at the UK, where it says some 15 million jobs are at risk of automation. report found that around half of 30-year-olds in the US earn less than their parents at the same age, compared to the 1970s, when almost 90 percent earned more. It's important to note, though, that there is disagreement about how bad the impact of automation on the job market will be. Some reports have suggested that up to 50 percent of jobs in developed countries are at risk, while others point out that only specific tasks will be automated — rather than whole professions.

Are people only evil? Only good?

I say it is a false thing because there will be always good into bad where you can change it bad into good or good be good and bad can be bad? I always keep it balances where they have to be equal.

How might a machine react to your characters?

A machine with no emotions basic off my characters, would put them into any spots into good or bad or even. Like for example Goku is good at his own business, where Jake doesn't show any improvement and doesn't care what he does he like what he likes to do.

If you could create a new ethical code for a machine what would it look like? Would it look similar to the sith, Gray, or Jedi code?

If I could create a new ethical code for a machine it would look like Gray Jedi, because one it will balance the sith Jedi and the Jedi code together to find the right progress in Gray Jedi code what good or bad for the machine that I am making for the Jedi code. The Gray Jedi will ask you why you are feeling this way or what type/situation your in to find out what is going on. A Jedi will judge you who you are or push you away and is an absolutism. A Sith Jedi will only use you that is consequential.

Virtue Ethics